UNIFIED TEAMWORK NEEDED IN WAR ON DEPRESSION—RULE

Penna. Superintendent of Public Instruction Speaks of the Situation

LESSON TO TEACH

Says Causes Are Not So Much Economical as Socio-logical

(This is the first of two articles based on exclusive interviews with Dr. James N. Rule, State Superintendent of Public Instruction.)

By Joseph A. Lostus

HARRISBURG, Dec. 21.—War on depression is education's battle and the social gospel of unified teamwork must be preached in the class rooms which, individually and collectively, have a definite task to perform in achieving the goal of economic stabilization.

This expression came today from Dr. James N. Rule, Pennsylvania's Superintendent of Public Instruction whose fingers rest on the throbbing pulse of a vast school system, a network of more than a million students and sixty thousand teachers.

"I believe it is generally conceded that the ultimate causes of the depression are not so much economical as they are sociological and psychological," Dr. Rule said. "We must attack the situation from those viewpoints. Education has been interested in developing individual efficiency rather than social efficiency. But we have learned that the important thing is not so much 'getting on' as it is 'getting on together.'"

The quiet, unobtrusive man who conceived and launched the ambitious ten-year program of educational development feels that conditions today emphasize the necessity and wisdom of looking ahead and the teaching of civic, social and political cooperation to avoid a recurrence. In connection with the ten-year project, Dr. Rule remarked:

"Because of the depression, education ought to review its program to see if it is serving these purposes as effectively as it should. It is imperative that the school very definitely teach the value and the necessity of all working together for the general welfare instead of for the individual. We must handle the aspirations of the public as a whole."

Pennsylvania's educational system is facing critical financial problems of its own, Dr. Rule observed in envisioning an era of radically revised taxation methods and a more just apportioning of the burden of school support.

"A larger share of the burden will have to be borne by the state itself," he added. He pointed out that although approximately $225,000,000 is spent annually for education in Pennsylvania, only 13 per cent is contributed by the State Treasury with the remaining 87 per cent levied on local districts.

This compares with New York state which pays practically one-third of the total cost; Maryland, 30 per cent; Florida, 75 per cent, and the little state of Delaware which almost entirely maintains its educational system with the state treasury funds.

The property tax, the chief local means of public school support, is pretty well broken down," Dr. Rule said. "Districts are finding it increasingly difficult to collect taxes. A new and fairer method of taxation to maintain education must be worked out."

He was disinclined to commit himself definitely on a suggested state income tax to be substituted for the greater share of the burden now resting on local districts, remarking only that "many excellent solutions seem to agree that this is the solution."

Dr. Rule revealed that a survey made by State College showed the farmer was contributing 15.6 per cent of his income to taxes, while the non-farmer was paying only 9.5 per cent.

"The intangibles are escaping the tax burden," he concluded. "Most of the wealth once was invested in property and real estate. But now it is invested in evidence of debt—stocks and bonds."

TELLS OF ORDEAL

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Dec. 21.—Still hysterical from her horrible experience of being forced to witness the assassination of J. W. Schatz, 56, wealthy manufacturer, Mrs. Florence Carozza today told the story of her ordeal. Schatz was killed by the Japanese butler who then stabbed Mrs. Carozza 14 times. Her life was saved when, after a fierce battle, the police were called by a telephone operator, who rescued her. Ginio Akiyama, 36, the butler, and his sister-in-law, Souda Atsaki, 26, are held today on first degree murder charges for the grand jury which was to convene January 4th.

MCADDEN TO JUSTIFY CHARGES

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—Faced with an investigation into his private life by indignant friends of President Hoover, Representative McAdden, of Pennsylvania, prepared today to justify his charges that the Hoover justification was engineered by international bankers. Referring to charges made on the floor of the House of Representatives that McAdden was "guilty of bribery," he said, "This scurrilous matter was ragged against me in my campaign three years ago and I was re-elected by a bigger majority than I ever had."

MUSSOLINI'S BROTHER DIES

Milan, Italy, Dec. 21.—Arnaldi Mussolini, noted editor and brother of Premier Benito Mussolini, died suddenly tonight at the age of 50. While accompanying his sister to the railway station he complained of feeling ill and collapsed a few minutes later. Medical aid was summoned but he was dead when physicians arrived.

POLA NEGRI RECOVERING

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 21.—After undergoing an emergency operation and blood transfusion, Pola Negri, Polish film star, today was reported by her physician to be past the crisis and on her way to recovery.

BOMB EXPLODES

Wilkes-Barre, Dec. 21.—Six persons—four children—were hurled from their beds and narrowly escaped death and five homes were partially wrecked today when a heavy dynamite bomb exploded on the porch of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tony LaGoma, of Pittston. The LaGomas and their four children were tossed from their beds by the blast but otherwise unhurt. The motive for the blast in which at least four sticks of dynamite were used, was a mystery.

CONGRESSMAN WATSON'S HOME IS RANSACKED

Not Determined as Yet if Valuables Were Taken from the Premises

OFFICERS INVESTIGATE

LANGHORNE, Dec. 21.—A small safe was blown open in the residence of Congressman Henry W. Watson, old Lincoln highway, and the house ransacked Saturday.

John F. Swope, caretaker of the burglar, was sent to Congress and Mrs. Watson, who are in Washington, D. C.

Swope found a shutter broken on the side of the house late today and upon further investigation discovered the window behind it had been shattered.

Trooper Farrell, Morrisville State Police, is conducting an investigation, following several meagre clues. It has not been determined whether or not any valuables were stolen.

Congressman Watson did not reveal in his telephone conversation with Swope if he will return immediately to his home.

Swope told the policeman that he lives above a garage which adjoins the residence and added that he did not hear any unusual noises during the night.

TARENTUM—Some of the larger colleges may be getting rich from football receipts, but not so with Tarentum High School which operated its 1931 football team at a loss of $362.38, according to C. C. Stoops, faculty football manager.

With the balance left over from the 1930 season, however, it was possible to make up the loss and install lockers for the home team in the athletic field house at Riverview Memorial Park.

The shortage would not have been so great had not a percentage of the receipts of the Union-Tarentum game been turned over to charity.

A Battle to the Debt

It looks as if Representative Collier of Mississippi, Chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, believes in doing his fighting at close range. He is shown getting perilously near to a clinch as he leans over to question Secretary of State Stimson during the stormy battle raging over Congressional ratification of the debt moratorium. The tenseness of the situation has been further aggravated by the sensational attack on the President by Representative McAdden of Pennsylvania, whose remarks led even to mention of impeachment.

FIND HEIRESS IN PROVIDENCE HOTEL

Father Prepares to Fly to His Missing Daughter In Rhode Island

SURE OF HER IDENTITY

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 21.—Virginia Penfield, 19-year-old Columbus, Ohio, heiress, who disappeared here last Thursday, was found this afternoon at the Narragansett House in Providence, R. I., according to a report received by the girl's father, C. J. Penfield.

Mr. Penfield declared he was convinced it was his daughter and had made identification of the fabulous checks found in her possession. She registered there yesterday, he said, and was suffering from a loss of memory. He made arrangements immediately to fly to his daughter.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 21.—(U.S.)—With only one new clue, police today redoubled their efforts to solve the mysterious disappearance of 19-year-old Virginia Penfield, Columbus, Ohio, heiress and student of the fashionable Mary Lyons School, at Swarthmore, near here.

The new clue points to the possibility of a mail in the case.

It was furnished by the Rev. J. H. Ricker, a clergyman, of Lancaster, Pa. The pastor told police he saw a girl resembling Miss Penfield paging a man in Broad street station here last Thursday afternoon, the day on which Miss Penfield disappeared.

The girl, he said, was in tears and was running up and down the station platform calling a man's name.

The girl's father, C. J. Penfield, wealthy business man who rushed here by airplane from Columbus, believes she may have a mental collapse from overstudy. He said Virginia may have been calling his name in the station.

"She had a nervous breakdown when she was in high school," he said. "I had the best specialist in nervous troubles in Columbus treat her at that time, and he said that except for the care bestowed on her then she might have lost her mind. The illness was brought on, the doctor said, by overstudy, and he suggested I find some way to keep her out of doors. I bought her a horse and from that time she dated her great fondness for horse back riding."

CHARITY GAME TO DECIDE CHAMPIONSHIP

Both Teams Prepare to Put Up Their Very Best Game

INTEREST SHOWN

Interest in the "charity" football game, to be played on the high school grounds, on Christmas morning, is increasing, and as a result the tickets are selling rapidly. Since the public has been informed that the entire proceeds from the sale of tickets will be turned over to the charity organizations, more willingness to buy has been shown. One of the citizens sized up the situation when he said: "I have the Christmas spirit within my heart, I want to help the unfortunate, but I haven't much to give. Here, however, is an opportunity to give the little that I can afford, without publicity, but with the knowledge, that the total sum that shall be raised will be used properly."

Last Saturday morning, the A. J. Reach Co., Philadelphia, manufacturers of sporting goods, presented a football to the Bristol Exchange Club to be used in the charity game. This is the regulation 15 football, which is used in all college games. The winning team will be presented with the football, to be kept by them as a remembrance of the occasion. This gift from the A. J. Reach Co. is greatly appreciated, more particularly because they are not a Bristol industry, and not expected to be interested in local charity.

Aside from the charitable purpose of the game, the contest will determine the championship of Bristol. Both teams have made a splendid showing this season, and both are anxious to win the coveted championship. In consequence it will be a hard-fought game, as each team will enter the contest with the determination to win. Each team has a large following, and taking everything into consideration it will undoubtedly be one of the most hotly contested and exciting games ever seen here. The high character of the officials in charge of the contest, however, will insure its proper supervision and control at all times and a good, clean game will be the result.

It is estimated that the members of the Exchange Club alone, have sold nearly a thousand tickets, and are still working hard. If the others into whose hands tickets have been placed, to be sold shall do their part, a nice sum will be raised for charity.

Too much cannot be said in praise of the Central Charity Committee, which dispenses charity throughout the town and the Italian Welfare Association which look after the needy of their own nationality. A few years ago there was no system in the distribution of charity, and the efforts of those interested, would often overlap, but with the organization of the Central Committee, this condition has been obviated, and today, practically all private charity is distributed through the advice of this committee.

Only a few days remain before this charity game will be played and those who have not yet purchased tickets are urged to do so at once. At this Christmas time, it will be well for all.

Miss Helen Doran and Warren Bilger, Jr., Wed

HULMEVILLE, Dec. 21.—At an Episcopal church in Elktion, Md., Saturday, Miss Helen R. Doran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Doran, Main street, was united in marriage to Warren Bilger, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Bilger, Sr., Durham Road, South Langhorne.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Smith. Mrs. Warren Bilger, Sr., accompanied the couple to Elktion.

MAKES APPEAL FOR FUNDS FOR NEEDY

Italian Association Finds Demands Continue to Increase Each Day

WILL NEED $3,000

As an incentive for others to contribute toward the fund of the Italian Welfare Association, Antonio Russo, president, today offered to contribute $5 per month during the coming winter, in addition to the $5 which he is now donating each month, providing five other Italians will contribute $5 each per month toward the fund for the poor and needy for the same length of time.

Mr. Russo today makes an appeal to the Italians of Bristol who are interested in the work which his association is doing. "I wish to call the attention of the public to the demands being made upon our organization."

"Since November 11th we have had demands for relief from 19 families which included 102 children and 35 adults. The amount of money expended for clothing, coal, groceries, shoes and other necessities total $649.74. If this demand continues it will be necessary for the Italians of Bristol to raise at least $3,000, to take care of the needy of their own nationality. The Welfare Association will need at least $500 from now until the end of the year."

"As president of the Italian Welfare Association I wish to appeal to those who have not yet made their donations and request them to contribute as soon as possible, as it is urgent that the children and adults be properly taken care of during the cold weather."

Mr. Russo expressed his appreciation for the fine work which his committee is doing and the work which a group of Italian men are accomplishing. They investigate each case and give much time and effort in the cause.

Fire Does Considerable Damage in Burlington

BURLINGTON, Dec. 21.—Damage believed to range from $5,000 to $10,000 was caused by a stubborn fire which threatened the East Broad street business section yesterday.

Fire men battled the blaze for more than two hours.

The fire started in the basement of the department store of Charles N. Arrow, at 13 East Broad street. Narrow said that he saw flames coming through the floor of the store as he was closing for the night and when he opened the cellar door the flames shot up through the building. He rushed to the Young America fire house nearby and turned in an alarm, but by that time the fire had gained considerable headway. It ate through the new two floors of the Arrow's property but did little damage to the apartment on the upper floors.

The A. & P. Store adjoining was slightly damaged by the flames and smoke and water rained some of the stock. Heavy smoke also filled the department store of J. Rosenfeld & Company at the corner of High and Broad streets and the McCroly 5 and 10 cent store on High street but firemen prevented the flames from spreading to these stores.

Narrow's entire stock of clothing, shoes and furniture was destroyed. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

According to Fire Chief Thomas Doyle the fire started either from the heater or from defective electric wiring in Arrow's cellar.

THE HOME of the homes which are for sale or rent, is in the "Real Estate" column of the Classified Section.

A TIME FOR IDEAS

Members of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association do not subscribe to the current theory that the country is in the grip of a buyers' strike which knows no scabs. They have proved their conviction that there are ways to make people spend their money.

The secret is the development and marketing of new and better gadgets. The buying public is fickle, always hungering for the new and novel. Even a new model of something old, such as the automobile, often does the trick when it seems impossible to pry a spendthrift loose from a nickel.

New products that have made good, as listed by the association are: super-modernistic furniture, quick-drying paint, new health foods, bread in the form of animals for children with weak or discriminating appetites, a new sausage made of fish, a concrete building material that rises like bread and is very light, artificial wool and illuminating gas made from corn products.

Almost anybody can go into business in this day and age but vastly fewer can do business. Success in business requires more ingenuity, originality and enterprise today than it did at the peak of the prosperity era. Then production was the thing; today the idea is what counts. The new and clever go over with a bang while old established lines rot on the shelves.

Millions jobless and billions of dollars tied up in deflated securities make it inevitable that there should be fewer dollars for spending purposes, but the fact remains that there are still millions with money in their pockets who are only waiting for the irresistible appeal.

BEAUTY

Feminine grace and charm desert the woman who specializes in athletic contests, according to the dictum of a Chicago woman artist. We are not much worried that many of the women of our acquaintance are going to turn out to be professional tennis or golf champions, but we have remarked that several of them show a most unwelcome and upsetting skill and adaptability to outdoor sports, which no man can look on unperturbed.

Man has always thought of business and sport as being his sports. Woman has proved herself at least equal in the one and she demonstrates on not a few occasions her ability to give him cards and oulets in the other.

It seems a sort of mean way to get back at the sex, then, after they have shown up, miscreant pretensions to superiority, by saying they are less beautiful and charming than if they had left physical development alone.

Few get very excited, it must be confessed, over women sports champions, but on the other hand everyone is glad to see that the girls of this generation are paying some attention to their bodies, that they walk correctly and play gracefully. Sometimes we suspect that never before this age were American women really so charming as they are now. We know that a lot of folk will want to disprove that, and claim that 35 years ago women with their hour-glass shapes, trailing skirts, and horrible coiffures were greater beauties, but we are going to stick to our opinion.

Only a Few More Shopping Days!

Make the most of them!

Do your shopping where it is most convenient—in your own home community.

But if you feel that you must go elsewhere, do your journeying the most comfortable and the least expensive way—by our buses.

They are operated half-hourly between Philadelphia City Line and Bristol.

They will bring you to Bristol quickly, safely, conveniently.

Or they will take you to the connecting trolleys at City Line, if you want to go to Philadelphia. And they will be waiting to bring you back.

Most important, after the safety of our service, is its economy. These are times when the saving of a dollar means the use of a dollar for some additional necessary article.

Bus service is so much cheaper than operating your own car that the wise person always takes the bus or trolley.

SYNOPSIS

Leaving Hawaii shortly after her father's death, young and beautiful Fanchon Meredith goes to San Francisco, where she meets and loves a handsome man named Tony. Fanchon is shocked to learn that Tony is a racketeer, implicated in a recent murder. She, too, is now wanted. Fanchon escapes in an airplane under the name of "Smith." Evelyn Howard, whom she had met on the boat coming from Hawaii, is said to be enroute to New York to live with her aunt, the wealthy Mrs. Carstairs, whom she has never met. After Fanchon confides in Evelyn, the latter treats her coolly. The plane crashes and Fanchon is the only survivor. She decides to escape Tony and the past and start life anew by masquerading as Evelyn. She requests a doctor to wire Mrs. Carstairs that "Evelyn" is safe. A wire comes from Mrs. Carstairs saying that Collin cannot meet Fanchon. Fanchon learns Collin is Mrs. Carstairs' only son. Mrs. Carstairs meets Fanchon at train explaining "But you're not Evelyn, are you? You can't be." The girl's terror of being discovered passes when Mrs. Carstairs explains she couldn't believe anyone so beautiful could belong in the family.

CHAPTER X

"I see now," Mrs. Carstairs said laughing, "what a foolish mistake for me to make! It is really a very good likeness. But I thought the other girl was—you. You said, 'the girl on the left.' So it was your mistake as well, my dear."

Fanchon said, low, and as steadily as she could,

"That was idiotic of me."

"Well, never mind. She," said Mrs. Carstairs, looking at Evelyn Howard abstractedly, "is well enough. In fact, I thought that in her features, I could see a trace of a suggestion of your mother's." She sighed and her face clouded.

"Oh, Evelyn," she cried, suddenly, "have you forgiven me, forgiven us all for our outrageous treatment of her . . . and of you?"

"Of course," said Fanchon, moved by the appeal in the blue eyes.

"You," said Mrs. Carstairs, "haven't the least look of May about you. You are much lovelier than she ever was. Perhaps," she added, with an effort, "you are like your father's people?"

"I have heard so," Fanchon said, honestly and took a deep breath of relief. She was still trembling a little from reaction.

"I won't," her aunt said, low, "ask you anything about the accident. It is too close to you now. Later, perhaps, when you feel more like telling me? I was half insane when the wire reached me, with gratitude, with realization of what might so easily have been." She smiled, waveringly and saw how Fanchon shivered at the mention of the disaster.

"We'll be home soon," Mrs. Carstairs said, "and you're to go to bed and rest for several days."

"The doctor said so," Fanchon admitted.

"I know he did. Good man, he wired me, quite on his own, and gave his orders. But I would have insisted anyway."

She went on,

"I came up to the apartment to meet you. We are, as I wrote you, settled in Southampton for the summer. I was anxious for you to get here as quickly as possible as I wish to entertain for you, when you are strong enough. In the autumn you shall be presented to society in New York and have a season here. Next spring, we may go abroad together. Would you like that, Evelyn?" she asked with wistfulness.

"I'd love it," said Fanchon, softly.

Oh, she thought, what a miserable coward I am! She looked about her frantically. She had expected to meet consideration, kindness, duty. She could have faced that, could have rendered something in return, for a measure, a time, of safety. But to encounter this warmth of seeking, asking, wistful affection was almost more than she could endure; it was something she had so longed for since her father's death, something she had longed for all her life as well. Dear as her father had been to her, she had always dreamed silently and secretly of a gracious, beautiful understanding mother. And here was such a woman, the perfect answer to those childish dreams. But she was taking what was offered her under the most hideous of false pretenses. She thought of Evelyn, of the shattered little body, gone by now perhaps to its lonely grave, surrounded by strangers. She put both hands to her face and shook with pity and despair and hatred of herself.

"My dear," said Mrs. Carstairs, gently, "I realize the strain you have been through. You must try and forget. And all the vanished years beside. You must begin all over again. With me."

Fanchon murmured something . . .

"so terribly kind," she said.

"Kind! As if I could make up for all the years of neglect and unkindness," Jennie Carstairs told her strongly. "I never can. It is you who are kind, Evelyn. If you knew how I have longed all my life, for a daughter! Collin is the best son in the world but most women want daughters, to . . . to fuss over, a little, to dress, to spoil a bit . . . I've always wanted a daughter," she said. "You know . . . did your mother tell you—that Collin was a twin? The other twin died. A dear little girl! Thirty years ago, but I've never forgotten," she said. "It was shortly after that that we went to England and France to live . . . Your uncle," she added, "was very kind, he understood. I was not young at the time, I was thirty or so, and I knew I would have no more children. It was a great blow to me . . . to us both."

There was a little silence. Fanchon felt her heart hit on a sudden surge of hope. She was not Evelyn Howard. She was not this woman's blood. But Evelyn was dead. You robbed the dead of nothing. Fanchon was alive. If she could be to this woman what Evelyn would have been; if, with her own longing for affection, her home and for safety, she could even be more than Evelyn would have been, would that not be counted, perhaps, in her favor? Evelyn, she knew, from the little she had seen of her, was less concerned with her emotional relationship to her aunt than what that aunt held out to her in the way of promises of ease, luxury, money—a chance perhaps to marry well. With those things Fanchon had very little concern. What she wanted and what she was prepared to give in return was something very different, something into which money and material things did not and could not enter.

She spoke, stumbling a little over the unaccustomed form of address.

"I—I want to make you as happy, Aunt Jennie," she said in her low, charmingly husky voice, "as you have made me already."

A little silence fell between them. And in it Fanchon vowed to dedicate herself to this woman's service, whatever it might be.

Presently—"Here we are," Mrs. Carstairs said blithely. "I'm putting you in one of the guest rooms for your own rooms are to be done over for you this summer."

"Gee!" was an apartment on upper Fifth Avenue; a penthouse apartment overlooking the Park and the reservoir. A man servant opened to them and Mrs. Carstairs said, "my niece, Miss Howard, Jameson."

Jameson, an elderly person, seemed genuinely moved. He made Fanchon a curious, stilted little speech of welcome and Fanchon smiled at him, gently. She realized then that all her servants adored Jennie Carstairs. It was easy to see why. "Jameson," explained Mrs. Carstairs, leading the way in, "has been with me for many years and so is one of the family. I brought him up from the country to look after us for a few days."

The apartment seemed enormous to Fanchon. She caught glimpses of a huge dining room, and music room, on one side, living room and library on the other, all opening off a square hall. These rooms, explained Mrs. Carstairs further, all opened upon a terrace and Fanchon could see through the long French windows flowers, blossoms, and small trees, gas chairs and couches and awnings.

"I keep the apartment in livable shape," Mrs. Carstairs went on, "as Collin runs in and out all summer and must have a place to stay."

She hesitated and began again her clear skin flushing.

"Collin . . ." she went on, "is up North. You may have wondered why he isn't in town to meet you?"

"No," said Fanchon with perfect truth, "I hadn't wondered at all."

"I wrote you," the other woman said, "about his attitude. But I would rather explain more fully later."

She took Fanchon into a lovely room on the second floor. It had a big connecting bath. "It is at the end of the hall from me," Mrs. Carstairs told her. "Your own room, when it is ready, opens on the gallery and next to mine."

A middle-aged woman was waiting in the room. "This is Emma," Mrs. Carstairs told Fanchon, "she will look after you."

She had done so already. The bed was turned down, the windows open to what cool air there was. A sheer nightgown and a negligee and slippers lay nearby.

"I guessed at the size," Mrs. Carstairs said, "You are taller than I thought, but we will manage to get some little frocks for you before we go down to the Island and with the minimum of discomfort. You wrote me, you know, that you had very little."

Fanchon flushed in shame for Evelyn Howard who could pack her trunk to come East and write her aunt that she "had very little." Had Fanchon been in her place . . . but she was in her place—she would have gotten along with what she had and said nothing out of sheer stubborn pride. She said now,

"Oh, but I didn't mean—I can manage perfectly well with what I have."

She wondered a little wildly just what clothes the trunk would contain. Evelyn, as she remembered her from shipboard, had rather run to frills and furbelows and clothes of an inexpensive material and lots of them. Fanchon's own tastes were more expensive yet simpler.

"Never mind that now," Mrs. Carstairs said quickly, "you get undressed and into a hot tub. Then you climb right into bed. I'm having my own doctor come and look you over, after your dinner."

"I'm perfectly all right," Fanchon protested, "please don't bother. Really, Aunt Jennie!"

"I want to be sure," the older woman told her, smiling, "You're to have a light supper on a tray and I will have one with you. Then the doctor. And tomorrow we will talk."

Side Lights in The News of World Capitals

By Alice Langellier

PARIS, Dec. 21.—Pere Noel (Father Christmas) has already put in his appearance in Paris, and if times are hard and money scarce, there are certainly not many signs of it in the holiday preparations now going on in the capital.

Following the custom of electrical decorations, the chief department stores have covered their fronts with designs even more elaborate than in former years. They turn Paris into a veritable little Wonderland for grown-ups as well as children, and provide fascinating free theatres for some sixty thousand people who watch the mechanical shows in the big windows every day.

On one shop-front a gigantic figure of a man is enjoying a gargantuan feast attended by Lilliputian chefs and waiters who keep his table supplied with every kind of amusing mechanical devices.

On another a big Santa Claus rides over the snow in a huge wooden shoe, while little gnomes send off playthings by the stork express and all sorts of birds flutter across the street in electric lights amid settings of house-tops and open chimneys.

The Pont Neuf district has been transformed into a happy hunting ground for Indian warriors. Lights flash and a snake starts up a palm tree; redskins hidden in tropical foliage shoot arrows across the streets where they reach monkey targets. Giraffes and all the beasts of the jungle are lined up by twos to watch the show.

At the Bazar de l'Hotel de Ville, a beaming sun shines out over an iceberg, and this sun will not set nor the ice melt until the New Year bells ring in 1932.

Inside the shops all over the city, the displays are no less amazing. Toy departments are crowded with every possible toy a child would dream of. One big shop has installed a miniature speedway where tiny French tots, free of charge, may get into a gay little automobile and pedal around the track as fast as they can go.

Fancy grocery-shops and chocolate stores are being stocked to the cracking point with luxuries from many lands; the fur-dealers never showed such beautiful wares, and the famous jewelry stores in the rue de la Paix are ablaze with diamonds, rubies and emeralds.

Everything is ready for the buyers and one seems to take it for granted that they will be on hand as usual.

Christmas Day is really unimportant in France. Masses are sung at midnight of Christmas Eve in all the churches, but these have purely religious significance, after which one goes on to a gay supper and dance.

Christmas is completely swapped by the great festival of New Year's Day, the biggest day in the year here, even more important than the Fourteenth of July, Bastille Day. On January first, the presents are given, cards, flowers and telegrams are sent and the family congregates for its annual banquet. Eating and dancing go on all day and through a large part of the night.

Pine-trees are so rare in France that Christmas trees are not found in many households. Children put their shoes by the fireplace, but never their stockings. There is rarely ever any snow in Paris, so French children know little of Santa Claus and his sleigh. But whatever is lacking in the Christmas spirit is certainly made up for by New Year's Day in France.

Every American who has ever been in Paris at this season of the year knows that his door-bell rings incessantly for two weeks before New Year's Day. One is accosted by good wishes and an open palm by the postman who has delivered one's letters throughout the past year, by the postman who delivered printed matter and the postboy who delivered a few pneumatiques (special delivery letters), by the boy who brought telegrams, the boy who forgets to deliver the papers until noon, the man who delivers the groceries, two sets of garbage collectors, two or three policemen on the beat, the milkman, the Charity Sisters, the street-cleaner, the girl who has brought the laundry and of course all of one's own private servants, not to mention that terrible French ogre, the concierge (house-porter) who holds her tenants in the hollow of her hand and even begrudges the very slightest polite effort necessary to obtain what she considers her due on the first day of every New Year.

EVENING GOWNS ARE MADE TO SERVE TWO PURPOSES THIS YEAR

Choice Afforded of Pajamas or Long Sweeping
Panels

By Alice Langellier

PARIS.—Evening wear was never more varied, with the designers catering to all purses as well as all types of beauty.

One of them is even making her evening gowns serve a double purpose. "Penguin" has a white crepe Padua bodice and interesting sleeves which can be wrapped in scarf lines. The princess skirts here are designed for evening so that a choice of pyjama or of sweeping panels may be made.

Velvet is the ideal material for the winter evening gown and is at its loveliest in all black and in all white. The ring velvets of the present day are so light and supple that they can be fashioned to the full romantic styles without the slightest suggestion of heaviness.

A black tulle frock with long mediaeval sleeves and cut in polonaise form is shown over a white cambric and lace underdress which is entirely separate.

Banana-colored cloth is an innovation for evening fashioned on pinaflore, the skirt slimly-gored and forming the old-fashioned boned corset with narrow straps of the cloth edged with purple velvet and connecting it in pinaflore fashion.

This corselet skirt, a revival of the nineties, makes a most practical evening mode for this economical winter season.

Velvet ribbon and floral-patterned mousseline de soie compose a most elaborate evening gown with graceful train and draped back where the velvet ribbon is carried from the left shoulder to make a looped bow with long ends at the point of the deep "V."

to remember that over nineteen centuries ago there was One who came to earth, and who gave us Christmas, with all its joys and pleasures. He was of lowly birth and born in a manger. It was he who said: "It is more blessed to give than to receive, and his whole life was characterized by giving and not receiving. Today it is in remembrance of him and his example of giving, that we give our gifts to those we love, at this Christmas season.

In this time of depression, when many citizens are suffering for want of food, when little children will be deprived of a visit from Santa Claus, it would seem well for all of us to remember the divine injunction, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

And then let us exhibit faith in the divine promise, and give that we may help the worthy ones in their extremities, knowing that the greatest happiness, the greatest pleasure, the greatest satisfaction, can come only when we are able to subordinate self, and so live that our lives may be helpful in the service which the Master expects us to give to those less fortunate than we.

Miss Elizabeth LeCompte.

Following the carns a delicious repast was served. At this time, Miss Priestley announced her engagement to Harry A. Beam, of Philadelphia. The decorations used were holly and laurel.

Those attending the party were: Misses Gertrude Spring, Marion Harrison, Janice Wagner, Eleanor Moore, Winifred Tracy, Elizabeth LeCompte, Elizabeth Leibfried and Florence Peirce.

Men Admit Stealing Car
After Near-Accident

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Dec. 21.—The theft of an automobile was bared last evening, when the car in which three men were riding, nearly crashed into a motorcycle being ridden by Sergeant J. T. Budihias, of the State highway patrol.

The trio, enroute to California in a new high-powered roadster, admitted stealing the machine in Teaneck, N. J. The three were arrested by Budihias.

The men, who gave their names as Nicholas Deosao, 23 years old, of Los Angeles; John Raymond, 22 years old, and Joseph Green, 23 years old, both of New York City, are being held for Department of Justice officers.

Taken by Sergeant Budihias before

Justice of the Peace H. Norman, fled to swerve his motorcycle to one side of the Lincoln Highway to avoid less driving, the men admitted stealing the car so they could go to California, they related now, in desperation, they took a ferry from New York, other motorists on the highway.

Papers found in the automobile disclosed that it was stolen from Ferdinand J. Messer, of Teaneck. Police Sergeant Budihias explained that he communicated with him.

The Bristol High School
Traffic Club

This helpful body of students was first organized in December, 1930, and is now almost exactly a year old. The first president of the club was Henry Ancker, who has since graduated. The second president was Joseph Britton, a Senior, and the third, now in office, Thomas Barrett. The other officers at present are:

Vice-President, Peter Borneice; secretary, Edward Monaco; treasurer, Raymond Pieo.

At present an investigation of the members is being made by the officers. From the results of this investigation, a revision of the membership will be made, and all those who are not interested or fundamentally necessary to the club will be suspended.

The rules of the Traffic Club are as follows:

1. All pupils must pass single file in the halls.
2. All pupils must pass to the back of the room for dismissal.
3. The classes passing in the hall have the right of way.
4. The pupils must not pass through the gym at lunch time or during classes.
5. Pupils must remain in the cafeteria while eating.
6. Pupils are allowed to stop at their lockers before 8:45 in the morning, during lunch hour, gym period, and after school.
7. No pupil shall use the hall by the shop during lunch period.
8. The small lunch room shall be used by the Seniors.
9. Senior High School shall remain seated in joint assembly until Junior High has passed out.
10. Pupils shall dismiss from the front of chapel.
11. The end stairs shall be used as down stairs only.
12. The center stairs shall be used as up stairs only.
13. No one shall pass from the cafeteria to lockers or classrooms until the ringing of the second bell.

The members are stationed at certain points in the halls and on the stairways to direct the students. The Traffic Club has been functioning rather well so far, but after the new arrangements it is expected to be working even better.

Ralph Bilderback, of the 10-2 class, was struck in the eye a few weeks ago. A small particle of the missile lodged under the lid, and his friend, John Walterick, took him to a nearby drug-store, where the druggist endeavored to remove it. However, it had fastened to the skin. After notifying Mr. Bilderback, they hurried to Dr. Webb, of Bristol.

Ralph is now under the care of a famous eye specialist, as there is the possibility of his going blind in the eye in which he was hit.

Christmas Celebration

The Junior High School will have its Christmas program tomorrow morning in assembly. In addition to special singing by the Junior High School Glee Club, and by the 9-5 girls, there will be two plays, one by the seventh and one by the eighth grades.

The seventh grade will have a recitation, "Signs of Christmas," by Tony D'Amico, and another, "Father Pays the Bills," by Earl Smith.

The play is entitled "Grandpa's Christmas Surprise," and the following will take part: Cousins—Amelia Leeper, Geraldine Shank, Florence McBain, Frances Soule, Betty Beswick, Charlotte Rathke, Muriel Sheldon; grandpa—George Brown.

The eighth grade play is called "The Strike in Santa Claus Land." The characters are as follows:

Mr. Santa Claus, Johnson Orr; Mrs. Santa Claus, Josephine Agresta; Dr. Curen Quickly, Robert James; Fairy Youngheart, Ruth VanEtten; Little Girl, Dorothy Kramers.

Christmas Dance

The dance that was held by the 11-B's in the High School auditorium on Friday evening was proclaimed a success. Those present enjoyed dancing under the elaborate decorations and to the music of Jack Foley's orchestra.

The class of '33 wishes to express their appreciation for the support of those attending, who made the dance a success.

The chaperones of the dance were Miss Cecilia Garrigues and Miss Evelyn Thomas, Mr. Townsend and Mr. Hertzler.

—BHS—

New Year's Dance

The 12-B class held a meeting after school Monday afternoon to appoint committees and to discuss plans for a dance to be given on New Year's night. All the dances sponsored by this class have been successful and this one will be no exception. A fine orchestra is to be engaged for the occasion and everyone is assured of a good time.

—BHS—

Additions to the Honor Roll

These names were omitted from the Honor Roll last week because some pupils had not received all their grades in time for publication.

—David Spector, Marie Buchler, Isabelle Nils, George Herman, Leon Schiffer, Eleanor Faber.

—BHS—

An Omission

In addition to the football letter men mentioned in last week's issue, there should have been listed the names of Charles Leighton, John Cole, and George Herman, manager.

Congratulations

Mrs. Graham, teacher of Room 208, has a home room with an unusual and an enviable record. No one in her room was tardy during the entire first three months of school, ending November 30.

Christmas Program

The Christmas Program for Senior High School Assembly is in charge of the Girl Reserves. They are planning to present eight pantomimes illustrating the Christmas Story. The pantomimes will be explained by appropriate Bible passages and effective singing. There will be recitations and solos during the intervals between the pantomimes.

Eleanor Finney will read the Bible selections. Marie Buchler, Lillian Popkin, Ruth Pickering and Alethia Myers will take part in the pantomimes. The choir will be composed of Dorothy Broadway, Mildred Dyer, Marjory Fagan, Alice Ludwig, Doris Hendricks, Margaret McCarthy.

Class Party

The 9-2 class is having a home-room party. They intend to assemble in their home room from 2:30 to 3:30 at which time they will exchange gifts and probably play games. They will, of course, have a very good time.

Christmas Spirit

Just what is this thing called Christmas Spirit? Is it a bug that persistently pesters you until you, too, don't a cheery smile, buy a Christmas tree and count the days until Christmas? Perhaps it is a little germ spreading Christmas Cheer just like a contagious disease. But no, it couldn't be either of these things, because it brings only joy and enthusiasm in its wake. It is more like a ray of sunshine reminding one that it is good to be alive while it cheers our hearts and warms our benumbed senses.

Whatever Christmas Spirit may be, it certainly isn't lacking in Bristol. One glance at our main street is enough to set the spirits soaring. The colorful lights, the Christmas trees, and the store-windows in their holiday attire must surely fill the most doleful spirits with Christmas Cheer.

In Bristol High School, also, Christmas Spirit is abundant. The Girl Reserves have collected about fifteen dollars, and enough toys to give to about 100 children. Even the long faces of the pupils have disappeared; groups are planning to exchange funny gifts; classes are secretly collecting money for their teachers' Christmas gift. An assembly program is being prepared to celebrate Christmas. Everyone is enthused about the annual kiddies' welfare party. There will be a tree and Santa Claus and good things to eat, not to mention the toys that Santa will bring later. With so much to look forward to, is it any wonder spirits are bubbling over?
